“Three Essentials of Power in Peacekeeping”

By

Lise Morjé Howard

June 3, 2021

8:00 p.m. Tokyo, 1:00 p.m. Paris, 7:00 a.m. New York

Rationale:

The extensive literature on UN peace operations has provided practitioners and academics with a breadth of explanations and answers to the fundamental question of whether or not UN peacekeeping works. In her book, Power in Peacekeeping, Lise Morjé Howard presents an empirically grounded theory of how peacekeepers actually exercise power. She offers a new typology that explains how peacekeeping differs from other forms of intervention and identifies three essentials of power in peacekeeping: persuasion, inducement, and coercion.
